What is a Stakeholders' Analysis?

A Stakeholders' analysis is a process of identification of all potential actors with interests or influence in SPRING's theme and of their expected attitudes towards the project activities and coming up proposals.

A stakeholders' analysis is an assessment resulting mostly in deciding whose influence to strengthen and whose influence to minimise. It results in deciding who to involve, in which way, in the activities to be implemented. The core question of a stakeholder analysis is: How should participation in the analysis and planning process be designed, in order that this process yields the optimal combination of relevant, realistic objectives and commitment from the key stakeholders?

The final aim is to maximize the social, economic and institutional benefits of the project target groups and ultimate beneficiaries, and minimise its potential negative impacts (including stakeholder conflicts).

Who is a Stakeholder?

Any individual, group of people, institution or company that may have a significant interest in the success or failure of a project (either as implementers, facilitators, beneficiaries or adversaries) are defined as 'stakeholders'.

Stakeholders, in the case of SPRING's project, are actors (persons or organizations) with a vested interests in the actions, processes and/or policies recommendations regarding alternative measures and treatment programmes for young addicted living in urban context and resulting from the project.

These stakeholders, or "interested parties," with reference to SPRING, could be grouped into the following categories:

- public bodies in the health sector;
- legislators and policy makers;
- non-governmental organizations (NGOs) and foundations;
- professional or specialized networks;
- specialised or general mass media;
- academic and research institutions;
- international organizations operating on SPRING theme; etc.

Which Stakeholders' characteristics have to be analysed?

The analysis includes stakeholders' characteristics as knowledge of the project theme, interests related to it, position for or against it, potential alliances with other stakeholders and ability to affect the project activities and outcomes (results). It is important to know not only the interest and the attitude of these stakeholders in SPRING intervention, but also their potential to contribute to the project.

Why is this analysis useful?

SPRING's partners can use the present stakeholders' analysis to identify the key actors and to assess their knowledge, interests, positions, alliances, and importance related to the project. This will allow each partner to interact more effectively with key stakeholders at national level and to increase support for SPRING activities, also for its sustainability in the long term. Conducting this analysis, can help to detect and act to prevent potential misunderstandings about and/or opposition to the project activities and proposals.

Prevention of and fight against crime:
a new initiative to identify best practices in the alternative measures & treatment programs and to organize a European prevention campaign for youth - SPRING

When a stakeholders' analysis and other key tools are used to lead the implementation, the project is more likely to succeed.

STEPS TO FOLLOW TO PERFORM SPRING' STAKEHOLDERS' ANALYSIS

Step 1. Preparation of a contact list of stakeholders (see excel format)

Please DEVELOP A SPECIFIC CONTACT LIST AT YOUR NATIONAL LEVEL, with the stakeholders' names, addresses, and phone numbers FILLING IN THE MODEL PROVIDED.

Step 2. Development of the stakeholders' participation matrix (see excel format)

The participation matrix helps to determine who to involve, how, and at which stage of the project implementation. It is part of the operational planning process.

It should help to give an answer to the following question: What participation (inform, consult, partnership, control) is appropriate by different stakeholders at the different stages of SPRING project implementation? Decide when and in which activities to involve the stakeholders identified through the analysis.

Refer to the following SPRING activities: analysis of the local contexts (WP4), Identification of the best practices (WP5), Pilot action (WP6), Workshop on the EU policies (WP7), European information and awareness campaign (WP8).
